Important Information for my Loved Ones

Note: This Information Form is NOT a substitute for your Will (“Last Will and Testament”) which is a separate document requiring compliance with legal formalities to be valid. A copy of this Form should be filed with your original Will, which your Executor should keep in safe custody for you.

Instructions for completion

- Keep this Form in the front section of a file with all the important documents indexed in section 12 below.
- All your bank accounts and other assets will be frozen and deceased estates take a long time to wind up. So check that your dependents will have enough on hand to tide them over for at least several months’ worth of living expenses. Ask your lawyer for advice on how best to do this – common solutions include separate bank accounts and investments, life assurance policies that will pay out directly to dependents on your death, family trusts and the like – remember to give full details of these in the appropriate section/s below, clearly marked as such.
- Make sure your loved ones know where to find this file and Form. Keep them in a very safe place so that sensitive information like passwords etc is fully secured. If your loved ones will need a safe code, key/s or access details to retrieve this file and Form, give them the security details separately.
- This form is best filled in on your computer / online as the text will automatically resize to fit neatly into the required fields. Once all the relevant details are completed, you can save or print the form via the buttons at the bottom of this document.

Section 10: Passwords, PINs, Codes, Keys, Safes etc

Instructions for this section

- Give full details of the location of things like safes, spare key boxes, security documents, firearm cabinets etc, and of the keys or codes needed to access them.
- Give details of how to access passwords, PIN numbers and access codes, which are a big issue in our electronic age but often overlooked. Giving these details makes it essential to keep this Information Form and this file themselves secure and to brief someone separately on how to access them.
- Your loved ones will need access to your computers, your cell phone, your online accounts, your email, your online payment portal, your Social Media pages, your home alarm and so on. For some ideas on how to do this securely read “Making Life Easier for Your Heirs in a Digital World” on Siller & Cohen’s website here. If you use a password manager like LastPass here look for functions like “Emergency Access” to share your passwords with your heirs, and “Secure Notes” to share information like PINs, safe and alarm codes, location of keys etc.

Section 11: Any Further Information and Notes

Instructions for this section

- Give full details here of anything and everything else your loved ones, advisers or Executor may need to know about – ask them if they can think of anything to add.
- You can also use this space to leave any personal messages you have for your loved ones, perhaps your wishes as to how you would like them to use their inheritances, perhaps explaining why you have divided your estate between them in your Will as you have – and so on.

Section 12: Index of Important Documents

Instructions for this section

- Where your file contains copies of documents, specify against each one where the originals are located.
- Delete/Add/Change below as needed.
- Recommendations:
 - Include a "My Directives" section. For any particular wishes in regard to funeral arrangements, cremation or other disposal of your mortal remains, wishes in regard to pets etc, that your lawyer confirms should not/need not be in your Will itself, leave a signed Directive giving details (or referring to any instructions in your Will).
 - Include the ID documents of yourself, spouse/life partner, children, dependants, heirs, beneficiaries, guardians etc.
 - Include other important family documents such as marriage certificate, ante-nuptial contract, divorce order, cohabitation agreement, maintenance agreement and so on.
 - Include Documents relating to assets and liabilities - title deeds, vehicle registration papers, trust deeds (and letters of authority), rental agreements, loan agreements, acknowledgments of debt, lease agreements, insurance policies, life policies, tax returns, tax records, CGT valuations; anything your family or Executor may need to access quickly and easily.
